PARTNERSHIP MISSION

As collaborative partners committed to excellence in education, both schools are committed to helping all students master the 21st Century skills to become college and career ready. Bridgewater State University and the Edgar B. Davis school strive to provide quality instruction and hold high academic expectations for all. Grounded in research-based practice, we are collaborative partners in education.

Together we:

- Strive to enhance the city of Brockton by educating a population of students who are culturally, linguistically, socio-economically and ethnically diverse.
- Promote a collaborative learning environment that welcomes our families, community members and faculties as partners in our students' learning.
- Recognize every learner: students, teachers and professionals-in-training to establish values of continuous learning and a commitment to vigorous academic performance.
- Enrich students' lives by providing the tools to succeed as responsible, respectful and productive citizens including opportunities to explore higher education.
- Provide opportunities for continuous professional growth for current educators and joint preparation of future educators.
- Encourage the integration of STEM education (science, technology/engineering, the arts and math) to improve academic achievement and level the learning field across socio-economic boundaries.
- Celebrate the individual differences and contributions of all learners by providing inclusive opportunities through the partnership.
- Encourage the integration of Arts Education and enrichment activities through all aspects of theater and performance.
